

The Daily Courant.

Friday, February 4. 1704

From the Bruffels Gazette, dated Jan. 15.

Constantinople, November 16.

AT present in this City all is quiet and throughout the whole Empire, and the People are universally well satisfied with the new Government.

The Grand Signior's Endeavours to reestablish good Order and Discipline in the publick Affairs, have gain'd him the Love of his Subjects. He is very Prudent, well skill'd in Arabick, and gives constant Application to Business. He has order'd the Sultan Valida to reside in the new Seraglio, with the same Authority he had in the Reign of Sultan Mustapha. He has order'd Troops to Patroll in the Night through the Streets of this City, to keep all Malecontents in Awe, and no body has offer'd to stir, since he caus'd a good number of those that were most concern'd in the last Tumults to be thrown into the Sea. He has promoted Tzelibi Mehemet from the Post of Lieutenant General, to that of Aga of the Janisaries, in the room of Tzalich Achmet, who on the 10th of this Month was carried in a Galley to the Island of Cyprus, there to be confin'd, for having had a great hand in the late Revolutions. The Reis Effendi being reputed a Man of great Ability and Experience in the Management of Affairs, is in great Favour with the Sultan, and, 'tis thought, will be promoted to one of the principal Offices at Court. The Sultan's Preparations of War are variously talk'd of, some say they are to be employ'd against Poland, and others against Hungary, but these are only Conjectures.

From the Harlem Courant, dated Jan. 24.

Venice, Jan. 4. Our Doge, by reason of an Indisposition, could not be present at the solemn Service perform'd in the Church of St. Mark on New-Years-day; the French Ambassador kept away likewise, to shew some Resentment of the Affront he pretends the Republick has put upon him, by annulling the Privileges of all Forreign Ministers Quarters; but the Pope's Nuncio and the Emperor's Ambassador were there; and were afterwards treated very splendidly according to Custom. By a Merchant Ship of this City that arriv'd here from Smirna the 2d instant, we learn, that the new Sultan is making a great Reform among the Officers of the Porte, and is determin'd to restore the Turkish Government to its ancient Vigour. He caus'd the Aga of the Janisaries, who was very busie in the late Revolution, to be put on board a Galley at Constantinople, and 'twas at first said he was to be carried to Cyprus; but since 'tis currently reported, that when the Galley was pretty far out at Sea, he was pursuant to the Sultan's Order strangled and thrown overboard. The Porte, 'tis certain, is resolv'd to observe religiously the Peace of Carlowitz, and to give no manner of Assistance to the Rebels in Hungary.

From the Hague Gazette, dated Jan. 24.

Nanci, Jan. 16. The Letters from Paris of the 13th inform us, that the Marshal de Marfin has written a Letter to the King concerning the State of Affairs in Germany, in which he acquaints his Majesty, that, after the taking of Ausburg, the Elector of Bavaria had given him Directions to punish the Burghers of that City, who, as the Elector pretends, violated the Neutrality they desir'd of him at a time when the Emperor could not succour them; and that the Elector intended after he should be Master of Passau, and by that means should be the better able to cover his own Country, to carry on the War with even greater Vigour than he has done hitherto. Then the Marshal gives a particular account of the Confusion in which the Affairs of Germany are at present involv'd, and tells the King, that his Troops were more incommoded by the Peasants than by the Emperor's Soldiers, because the latter frequently lay down their Arms on condition of being allow'd to retire with a little Baggage. The same Letters say, that an Express was arriv'd from Monsieur de Puisieux the Ambassador of France in Switzerland, bringing Advice that the Duke of Savoy had signified to the Cantons, that whereas they had inform'd him the French Court was willing to yield to a Neutrality for Savoy, provided his Royal Highness would suffer the French to keep open a Communication through his Country with their Army in Italy, he was determin'd much rather to push on the War, and not to tye up his Hands by a Neutrality of which the French would reap all the Advantage; and that he would desire the Cantons to give themselves no further trouble on his Account, except to furnish him with the Succours they were oblig'd to by their Alliance with him.
